The following is a summary of the Medical Association of the State of Alabama's 2021 Legislative Recap.

Moving Medicine Forward in 2021

While preventing dangerous and problematic proposals from becoming law consumes much of the Association's advocacy efforts, at the same time the Association is trying to move medicine forward each session. The 2021 Session saw continued success for the Association in two top-priority funding requests (MMRC and BMSA) as well as the enactment of legislation to further access to physicianled, team-based care for patients in Alabama.

• Protection from COVID-19 frivolous lawsuits. The Medical Association worked with both Sen. Arthur Orr (R-Decatur) and a coalition of other organizations on legislation providing liability protection to businesses but also to physicians for care whose provision to patients was affected or impacted by COVID-19 and/or the state's response to the pandemic. This bill was one of the first to become law in 2021.

• Board of Medical Scholarship Awards. As she did in 2020, Gov. Ivey recommended maintaining the additional $500,000 increase for the Board of Medical Scholarship Awards. The legislature agreed, and the total amount for physician student loans for 2022 remains at $1.9 million, allowing roughly 10 medical school tuition loans to be granted annually to physicians willing to set up practice in medically underserved areas of Alabama. This program remains one of the best mechanisms for expanding access to quality care.

• Expanding Broadband in Alabama. The legislation that passed creates a digital expansion authority to expand access to the internet in all 67 counties and will undoubtedly help patients connect with their physicians via telehealth.

• Medicaid Expansion. The Association, as part of Cover Alabama -

a coalition of more than 100 organizations supporting Medicaid expansion – continues to advocate for those caught in the coverage gap.

Fighting "Scope Creep"

Many people would like to be a physician, but few are willing to endure medical school, residency, and all the other various education and training requirements to become an M.D. or D.O. Instead of pursuing higher education, some non-physician organizations pursue legislative changes as an end-aroundmeans to practice medicine, endangering quality care for patients.

• Imaging Technology. A newlycreated state board could have unilaterally set the scope of practice for imaging technologists and significantly increased costs to medical practices utilizing medical imaging. Working with the Alabama Academy of Radiology, the Alabama Academy of Family Physicians and other medical specialty societies, the Association was able to reach a consensus with the technologists on their legislation.

• State Board of Nursing. The State Board of Nursing could have gained jurisdiction over, along with the ability to charge licensure fees to, medical assistants working in physician offices. Working with a coalition of partners, the problems with the legislation were resolved.

• Interstate Compacts. Various "interstate compacts" for non-physicians could have enabled "scope creep" far beyond what Alabama law allows.

Beating Back the Lawsuit Industry

Plaintiff lawyers are constantly seeking new opportunities to sue physicians. Alabama's medical liability laws have long been recognized for ensuring a stable legal climate and fostering fairness in the courtroom. But those laws come in jeopardy every session and the Association must defend against allowing more frivolous lawsuits to be filed against physicians.

• Vaccine-related Lawsuits. New vaccine-related lawsuits against physicianemployers and medical practices were prevented from becoming law.

• Medicaid Fraud. Physicians accepting Medicaid could have been subject to whistleblower lawsuits for honest billing mistakes, costing $5,500-$11,000 per billing mistake plus triple damages under a Medicaid fraud bill. The Medical Association, along with a coalition of health care associations, offered a substitute bill but it was rejected by the sponsor.

• Seizure Action Plan. Physicians could have been held liable for the actions of school system employees if the physician helped create a "seizure action plan" for his or her minor child patient with a seizure disorder. The Association worked with the bill sponsor to remove the problematic language.

Other Health-Related Legislation of Interest

• Board of Medical Examiners/ Medical Licensure Commission. Legislation would have abolished the Board of Medical Examiners (BME) and Medical Licensure Commission, and banned physicians who were members of county, state or national medical and specialty societies from participating in regulating their profession.

The proposed structure in the legislation would also have ensured little diversity among physicians serving on the reconstituted BME and would likely have prevented rural physicians from being represented.

• State Health Officer/State Committee of Public Health. Legislation would have allowed for a non-physician to head the Alabama Department of Health (ADPH) and would have replaced most of the physicians on the committee with non-physicians. Instead of making drastic changes to ADPH midstream, the legislature and the governor agreed to a full-spectrum study of the state's COVID-19 response efforts between now and the beginning of the 2022 Session to identify areas for improvement moving forward. • Medical Cannabis. Legislation was enacted to enable cannabis for medicinal use if approved by a physician certified by the state to recommend it to patients. The bill provides for the regulation by the state, from "seed to sale," of cannabis for medicinal use and creates a new commission to oversee all aspects (other than physician regulation) of cannabis.

The new law allows physicians to become "certifying physicians" and allows patients who are approved by a certifying physician to access medical cannabis at a state approved dispensary.

In 2019, the Medical Association did an in-depth survey of its members to gauge Alabama physicians' opinions on the topic. While opinions amongst individual physicians on cannabis for medicinal use differed then and still do, there was broad support amongst physicians for – IF cannabis for medicinal use were legalized in Alabama – that the state would regulate and inspect the products. As well, there was also broad support for keeping all regulation of physicians who choose to recommend cannabis to patients under the Board of Medical Examiners and not moved under the purview of the new Cannabis Commission or the Agriculture Department. Those areas and others of strong support identified via the 2019 survey, as well as several others, became the basis for the Association's advocacy efforts on the legislation. As a result, those areas of broad agreement were included in the final bill that passed.

• Pharmacy Benefit Managers. Legislation was enacted that prevents pharmacy benefit managers (PBMs) from steering patients to use mailorder pharmacies and prevent price discrimination. It also requires the PBM to act as a fiduciary to clients and prevents them from stopping pharmacists from disclosing prices.

• Countywide Public Health Orders. Legislation was filed to change the way county health officers issued countywide public health orders. Various bills were filed related to county health orders. Some would have established an advisory panel to weigh in on countywide health orders before implementation while others would have prohibited a county health officer from issuing an order that relates to pandemic or outbreak unless it was approved by the State Health Officer. These bills did not pass.

• Statewide Public Health Orders. Legislation was filed to change how statewide public health orders are issued and also to curtail the emergency declaration powers of the governor. These bills did not pass.

• Vaccine Passports. Multiple pieces of legislation were filed related to banning vaccine passports. The bill that passed on the final legislative day leaves in place existing immunization requirements for students (and also allows exceptions for religious or medical reasons) but bans the issuance of vaccine passports in Alabama by the state or any other governmental body. It also prevents businesses from being able to require proof of vaccination for entry into a business or as a condition for provision of a good or service to a customer.
